I remember al the pranks we played on each other after the two of you moved in next door. There is this one that was so memorable that it is hard to forget. Alisa and DAn were in the bathroom doing their thing. Little did I know that they were in there. so being nice the flowers on the porch were watered well the water accidently went in thru the window.. all I heard was screams and cussing as it turned out they were in there doing the married thing and yea. I ran home and hide for a while it was the joke of all jokes. Poor Dan came out not happy and their flowers were never watered by me again .

I am fortunate to have four son-in-law's that have been good people. Danny is the first of those son-in-law's to leave this earth and be with those who've gone before. I will miss him. I will miss the smile, the silly jokes, the Willing hands an energy to help in any project I might have started , the warm hugs and always "I love you Mom, when parting ways He was a good dad, a fine friend a good grandad , a good husband and friend to my daughter. He will always be apart of me and I will love him the moon and back.
